

Fixture Report on Signal Coding

This fixture document exists only for testing the reader.

It has three pages so that page navigation can be verified.

Section two begins here.

The relevant passage states that redundancy lets a receiver recover a message after noise corrupts p

Another sentence follows so there is surrounding context for the highlight.

Final page.

Nothing else of note appears on this last page.